THE ARMY ANNOUNCES "LOAN REPAYMENT."

If you've gone to college on a Perkins Loan or a Stafford Loan, the Army has great news for you.

Instead of spending a long time paying back the money you owe, you could spend a short time in the Army and get some or all of your college debt repaid.

TOTAL REPAYMENT.

If you qualify, each year of active service reduces your debt by 1/3 or $1,500, whichever is greater. Enlisting for three or more years covers your debt no matter how large it is.

EVEN IN THE RESERVE.

You can get help with your student loan while you stay at home, by serving in the Army Reserve. Every year of Army Reserve service wipes out 15% of your indebtedness or $500, whichever is greater.

Thus, during a standard eight-year Reserve enlistment, much of the student's college debt can be eliminated, up to $10,000, for most MOS's. A $20,000 student loan repayment level has recently been approved for selected critical MOS's. This program eliminates 15% of the applicant's indebtedness or $3,000, whichever is greater, up to a $20,000 limit, each year the applicant serves.

STRIPES FROM THE START.

Your college education probably qualifies you to start at a higher rank and a higher pay grade.
